Celebrate Mexican & Latin American Independence Day

art by Ricardo Levins Morales

On September 15, 1810, Father Miguel Hidalgo delivered the Grito de Dolores, a declaration of independence from Spanish colonialism; and a call for the abolition of African slavery, for an end to the caste system exploiting Indians, and for social and economic reform. Today, Latin Americans are forced out of their home countries by a history of U.S. military intervention and the neo-colonialism of the International Monetary Fund and World Bank debt payments, imposed austerity programs, privatization schemes and "free trade" agreements - U.S. corporate domination to create a source of cheap labor. When they migrate to the United States, they face ICE repression, denial of their right to organize and no legal enforcement of workplace protections - forcing them into low-wage jobs. Join us in a new Grito - a call for worker rights for all as human rights, independence from poverty and full legalization.
