TAKE LABOR DAY TO THE STREETS!

Hyatt Fisherman's Wharf workers have been engaged in a struggle for dignity, respect, a voice on the job and a fair process to a card check since 2008.

The Hyatt Fisherman's Wharf was the first of 15 non-union Hyatt hotels to publicly call on Hyatt to agree to a fair process for workers to organize.

The Hyatt Fisherman's Wharf is now owned by the real estate company Chesapeake Lodging Trust, but workers are still not afforded the same basic benefits and protections that unionized hotel workers across San Francisco have, like quality affordable health care, pension, and job security.

Show our power to the non-union Hyatt Fisherman's Wharf who intends to destroy our standard of living!*
