

Winning last November's Prop C, making game-changing investments in housing and mental health and substance abuse services for homeless people, was a huge victory over some of the City's biggest and richest companies, which would pay a small tax.

Ben Lintschinger, of Glide's Center for Social Justice, will bring us up-to-date on Prop C:

- What does Prop C provide us in housing and mental health and substance abuse services?
- What is Prop C's legal status in the face of a possible suit?
- What are homeless people and their advocates doing to start designing Prop C's housing and service programs to make sure they meet the needs of homeless peoples?
- Why San Francisco needs to let Prop C's voluntary housing and mental health services do their good work for all homeless people, instead of locking up some homeless people and forcing inadequate services on them through SB 1045 conservatorships.
